Gq2/2 Assessment Rolls

The Assessment formed a considerable part of the Town Council's income and was the forerunner of modern council tax. Assessment Rolls provide details of properties, their owners and occupants, in relation to who was responsible for paying certain elements of the tax. In general terms the amount payable was calculated against the value of property and comprised various parts i.e. water. Valuation Rolls were the published version of the total values and amounts payable.

Gq2/6 Police Commissioners

Although local police commissioners were elected with powers to provide a police force they also had responsibility for the cleansing, lighting, policing and public health of the Burgh. From 1850, 'populous places' with a population over 1200, (reduced to 700 in 1862) could apply to become Burghs of this type, or 'Police Burghs' as they came to be known. Despite the name, smaller Burghs adopting the 1862 Act were not allowed to establish police forces.

The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act 1892 (55 & 56 Vict., c.55) ended the overlap and friction which had existed between Burgh Councils and Police Commissioners by restricting powers to either one or the other. Increased public health powers were provided and only Burghs with 7000 or more inhabitants were allowed to retain their police forces. Police Commissioners were abolished by the Town Councils (Scotland) Act 1900 (63 & 64 Vict., c.49), in favour of the older term of 'provost, bailies and councillors'. The records of the Police Commissioners record their activities concerning their responsibilities for public health and safety. Records of the Ayrshire Constabulary are held at Glasgow City Archives.

Associated Bodies

Associated bodies were concerned with matters closely related to official Burgh activities and many Burgh officials sat on their committees/boards. Although these records do not strictly originate from the Burgh itself, they were kept alongside the Burgh records because of this connection. The Joint Committee comprised representatives from Kilwinning Town Council and Irvine District Council, which both had responsibilities for cemeteries. The Cash Books contains details of payments for staff wages, repairs to the cemetery and payments received for memorials.
